Artist statement

My life took a turn when in 2017 a person I called a friend set my house on fire. I lost everything I owned, fell into a severe depression and struggle with it to this day.

Suffering from depression is like being in prison. One is locked into an endless downward spiral. Even when amongst people, the feeling of isolation is almost overwhelming. All the anger is directed inwards and starts eating you up from inside. It feels as if the mouth is defect, destructed, sewn shut. No way to express what is going on inside. I admitted myself to a mental institution where I started to paint like a maniac – literally.

Since I figured out, my depression was not going to go away so easily, I decided to give it a face. And another one. And another one.

A small introduction to my art can be seen here and here.

OBJECTIVE

Art can never be expressed in only one form, there is always a possible combination of expressions addressing multiple senses in the observer or listener. It is this combination of all possible forms and expressions of art that has been fascinating me all my life.
